BARRICADES IN BRISTOL
On 2 June Bishopston Community Centre in Bristol was occupied to keep it in the hands of the community that has been fighting the Church Council, who own the building, claim they need the building for a new church and so evicted the Bishopston Community Association. The Community Association had offered to buy the building with £2 million lottery funding, but the church refused.

Local people believe the church actually intends to sell the building. For 12 years the centre has been run without financial input from the council or the church, providing a impressive selection of activities and events. The current squatters have continued this work, favouring a more inclusive definition of community than that adopted by the church, and acting in defence of community space. A possession order has now been granted, so barracks are expected any day. However, the building has been well barricaded, and the eviction looks like it will be long term.

ARTY HOOD WEARS APPEAR
The appeal to the House of Lords over Manchester Airport’s eviction of the camps at Arthur’s wood has been thrown out this month, leaving the camps on eviction alert. However, it is not known whether the airport will wait to evict until after the bird nesting season finishes which is due to be August 31st.

Nevertheless, the new case and this month’s appeal, the campaign intends to bring a private prosecution against the airport.

A camp has been good for more people to come and stay, or just visit if they can. It is a few miles to be on a phone tree then ring Manchester East MP Illie Sillitoe (226684) or Manchester West MP Mike Stone (0161 284 3838)

Meanwhile the airport is attempting to evict one of the camps which is on a ‘development site’, which will make it much easier for them to get future terminals, etc. through the planning system

CAR PARK CRIME SCENE
Five people hit the site of a new multi storey car park in Leeds city centre earlier this month. Three were hit by a bus while two of the others climbed a crane to hang a banner and present concrete being poured. Work was stopped for about an hour. Aside from a few threats workers were interested and agreed about the stupidity of the council’s planning application.

This action was partly planned as an affinity group building exercise and was deemed successful at this role.

A campaign by concerned local residents and parents forced McDonalds to withdraw their planning application. The corporation had intended to create a drive-through McSweeper with its main vehicle entrance opposite a primary school right next to a suburban accident-blackspot junction on Liverpool’s busy Southport Rd. Petitions garnered several thousand signatures, house protests, a four day sit-in in the local council’s neighbourhood, and the McFifth were tipped off by council officials shortly before the meeting in which their application looked certain to be knocked back. This enabled them to maintain their never refused planning permission ‘beast – funny how it’s one of the most oppressive council departments becomes when faced with big corporations.

STOP THE EVICTION!
On Saturday June 12th, demonstrators occupied two banks, blockaded a third and staged an unprecedented mass march. 100 people were briefly held after a banner reading ‘Global Capital Can Bank On Global Resistance’. Whistle blowing, drumming protestors stormed into the Clydesdale Bank on Hanover Street. Exiting the Clydebank, the crowd next took over the Abbey National and staged a half hour party inside with drumming, dancing and singing, while the bank’s plate glass windows were smashed with posters. Later a 100 strong crowd blockaded the Halifax on George St., then marched along George St. & Princes St., Edinburgh’s main street. The day’s actions finished with a demonstration outside the Bank of Scotland Headquarters.

Six vans loads of police were in attendance but were unable to stop the protest. There were no arrests.

One protestor commented that: “capitalism has always been inherently flawed; it reduces people and the environment to a beautifully rich natural environment. It is just one dimension: the one that increases profits.”

EFL SOLIDARITY ACTION
Over the past month, the Mexican government has intensified its offensive against Zapatista villages in Chiapas causing more than 10,000 people to flee their homes. In response to an email from the EZLN (Zapatista National Liberation Army, EZLN) the newly-formed Chiapas Link group in Newcastle (UK) targeted their local Nestle factory in solidarity with the Zapatista struggle. Nestle is a major investor in the food sector in Mexico. In 1997 the company spent $1 billion to acquire foods giant Frito-Lay Britain, nation-wide, and is planning a further £100 million of investments in Chiapas (hailed by the Mexican President as a great leap forward in the peace process).

Security guards at the Nestle factory in Fawdon, Newcastle were caught unaware as two protestors walked through the gates and climbed onto the roof of a factory building hanging a banner reading ‘Nestle: OUT OF MEXICO’. Others entered through the factory front door, after occupying the factory for an hour and repeated warnings, the group decided to leave. Local papers and radio covered the protest raising the issue of Nestle’s collaboration with the oppressive Mexican regime. PARK ROCK PROTEST
A 3-acre inner-city green space within the boundaries of Liverpool’s Prince’s Park is under threat from Liverpool City Council, planning to convert the site into a £20 million development of luxury flats. The site is the only wild area in a district with numerous empty properties and local people. The group have been out in force at the planned evictions.

With legal challenges being mounted (planning permission has already been granted), local people have united, and a group with the aim to occupy the site: 4-5 houses have been built, and more walkways and look-outs are being built. In the light of the recent House of Lords ruling disapproving a disguised village green, hopes are high that victory can be achieved before evictions take place. It is still not clear what the developers, a local firm, are planning to do, they seem to have 5-6 permissions: to sell the land on to another larger firm, or to apply for a court order to evict. Bodies will be needed if an eviction alert occurs - donations (esp. camping equipment) are welcome.

All are welcome at the Noочекt II free festival: Sunday July 11th, Princes Park. Info 0463 179 279

“I saw not a ‘campaign’ or a ‘message’. It was an attempt to physically prevent the destructive machine process of capital from going on. It was an act of self defence in a life or death struggle for the right to live. Beasts who kill to claim on power and privilege.”

It was lunchtime, and 7 enormous cabs had reached the gates of the入侵点, both with and without forks. One of the forks was broken, and the entrance was blocked with a banner reading “Nestle: OUT OF MEXICO”. ’Go get your money's worth...little restaurants, newsagents and shops being destroyed...I was scared and not just of the police.”

As police lines pushed people back, the people retained and with rising numbers, the police were only strengthened, including white paint bombs which splattered a number of riot police. The windows of the Dutch Rutles link building were smashed and a person in a window and one newspaper said that Normand Bank was damaged by it. As the crowd was divided up by police lines, and the sound system led out, an elite war car was invaded, disabled, drivers knocked back, and the interior destroyed. Four of the tube doors were ruined, and the main door ruined in an easy exit was not possible - some people headed for Waterloo station where the police managed to control the crowd. Some people who didn’t happen, some home, and some towards Tradgular Square where people were hanging out into the night.

There were 15 arrests and nearly 50 injured on the day itself. Since then there have been hundreds of arrests for criminal action as police have been viewing CCTV and identifying individuals, many of whom have never worn masks.

M11 (non) OPENING

The M11 link road in North East London was the scene of protest once again on 7th June. The road has now been closed by protesters and resistance since the battle of the Chestnut tree in December ’93, when people in the ancient sanctuary near Wanstead were evicted. Horses were used to clear the road of protesters, and then converged with others outside the link road police forces along the road and over the Square Mile. The police used a variety of weapons, including batons, rubber bullets, tear gas and smoke bombs, to disperse those who refused to leave.

However, this should not lull us into a false sense of security. As I-Contact video had been compiled by Undercurrents and I-Contact was being shown at an event, police went up to the window, and attempted to get in by force. Police at Wanstead station continued to hold the train station. There were 3 trains stopped at the station, and a lot of people were waiting for the trains never to arrive.

UNIONS TARGETED

Anti MAC

McDonalds on Liverpool Street was picketed, around 200 people gathered outside the restaurant, and a lot of people were waiting for them to gather for the picnic. At 4.30, a small group of police left the picnic to the Cafe a Picnic in Bishopsgate, McDonalds had bought the Cafe a picnic chain earlier this year. There was a lot of a lot of people waiting for them, which turned out not to be a problem as the cafe was already shut, probably due to weather conditions.

UNIONS TARGETED

About 40 activists, including some from the National Union of Rail, Maritime and Transport Workers (RMT), were arrested outside the railway offices of the TUC and the country’s largest union, Unison. Whilst not actually in the Square Mile, the 40 activists were arrested as they were in hand with Capital. Unions have consistently sold out workers, recent examples include London Underground, Strikers and the Magnets.

More actions are planned.

NUCLEAR CONVOY STOPPED

A convoy delivering Trident nuclear warheads to the submarines at the Baseline on the Clyde, on the day of the International Anti-Nuclear demonstration. The convoy was disrupted by protesters on the Striling to Ballock line, with drivers being goaded into reversing by parties of over 100.

Local people from the village of Bishulvy came out of their houses in support of the protest. The anti-nuclear demonstration ‘Stop the Peace Convoy’, had been spotted in advance and the police presence was massive. The protestors managed to park three nuclear Convoy trucks complete with banners, and reach the convoy. One person died under the first carrier, but 55 people dragged him out after about 5 minutes. 11 arrests later, the convoy, which had left AWE Burmahfield near Oxford around 9am, turned towards Cogdert.

Many thanks to SAC Coupdevil, the convoy’s destination, a Trident Ploughshares activist was detained for breaking into work on the Trident nuclear weapons store.

REDIRECT THE STREETS

Two reclaim the streets parties took place this month.

One took place in Cambridge (late afternoon) and the other in Newcastle on the 12th of June. Unfortunately the Newcastle meeting had a couple of problem areas on either. Upcoming party, Bristol in July and Norwich in September. See Dates for Diary.

Autonomous Actions on June 18th

AUCTIONS IN LT

Hundreds of financial sector workers failed to turn up for work, and thereby have shown their firms to avoid the City for fear of possible riots. Some disruption was caused in the City even before anyone really anything was happening.

PAINT JOB

Five small groups went to London to splatter 5 places with one paint at midnight on June 18th. Unfortunately, the weather conditions meant that much of the paint was lost. The Groups were the Animal Rights Demo, the Anti-MAC and the BNP

HAND AND RAIL BLOCKADES

Fire alarms in 3 consecutive tube stations on the district and circle lines were activated (the theory being that this would cause the trains to stop). The 4th station couldn’t be done because it had been evacuated, suggesting that it worked.

Two climbers closed Tower Bridge to traffic by abseiling into the path of traffic from one of the towers. A banner was hung, reading ‘Life Before Profit’. They were removed by police climbers who appeared to be ready for this sort of eventuality. They were arrested, but got away with a caution and were released in time for the carnival.

Am and rail traffic hour attempting to enter Moorgate road on its way into the square mile, was slowed by 40 activists who put D-lock steel cable from one side of the road to the other and attached a banner to it reading ‘warning, steel cables attached’. It is not known for how long this remained in place as the activists left quite quickly after the police arrived.

One group didn’t make it to their meeting point due to tube chaos, and joined the animal rights march instead.

CRITICAL MASS

At 7.45 a.m about 5-600 cyclists staged a critical mass cycle ride, disrupting the traffic all over the Square Mile. This carried on all morning, including the food stalls, which were shut down, and then converged with others outside the link road police forces along the road and over the Square Mile. HAGNENCIA WEEKENDER

On Saturday 5th June, our O’Connell Cafe (a loose collective of people who’ve squatted a series of buildings in Manchester, including the应收账款 scut park) relocated the Hacendosa for the people.

The legendary night club was squatted to spread information about June 18th, and about counter- culture generally. It was also meant to raise money to help the people. Despite the police presence, money was raised for a few weeks before.

About 300 young people turned up for the free party, but the police took a heavy line, and decided to besiege the building. People inside had a great time in the Hacendosa. It had a number of bars, so it was possible to have different events in different parts of the building. But the police seemed to be in control.

Life however was not so great for those stuck on the outside. They had to sleep in the streets, and were not allowed to avoid the cops for fear of possible riots. So, they were unable to avoid the City for fear of possible riots. So, they were unable to avoid the City for fear of possible riots. PROTESTS

ANIMAL ABUSE IS TRANSITIONAL AS CAPITAL

London Animal Action decided to protest against the exploitation of animals under capitalism. About 200 people marched behind a banner which read ‘Kill Capitalism Not Animals’ to the offices of the British Farm Animal Welfare Council and the British Poultry Association. They then went to the HQ of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund (ICRF) in Holborn and marched into the City of London to meet up with the carnival at Liverpool Street. There was huge police presence, including photographers, but no arrests.

EDINBURGH

On the night of the 17/18 June, an unknown group of friends who were not involved in any Earth First! protests, parked their cars in front of a Reed Employment office and fly-posted a Reed Recruitment ad.

The group stated that “we hate workfare, the companies who profit from it, and the whole exploitation system.” They explained: “We took this action as part of our opposition to all forms of capitalist reproduction.” They coordinate a Deal in London and as part of the global day of action against the capitalist system.

GLASGOW

Between 400 and 500 people participated in a massive 12 hour action complete with two sound systems and drummers. The unauthorised march wound its way through the city where the group held two massive protests staged a mini critical mass.

The group used 10 000 cables! and a huge number of fake press passes and leaflets was distributed. Some anti-capitalist banners were carried, one of which proudly proclaimed ‘Capitalism Kills’.

The march stopped at various sites, including the local Council Chambers, an Armed Forces Careers officer where demonstraters hammered on the windows, a large Bank of Scotland branch, and the Police HQ. The action went on around 7 hours in all, with people departing from the site by 10.00pm.

There were no arrests, the only known attempt at an arrest, in George Square, was thwarted by demonstrators who removed the person from the police and freed the handcuffed prisoner.
