Disarm DSEi
A fiesta for life against death

Before...
Two squats in south London being used as preparation space were raided on Sept 7th. 4 arrests were made and props destroyed. Events were held in Brighton and London to highlight DSEi and the arms trade.

The big day...
At midday on Sept 11th the main body of activists set off with the London RTS samba band but were soon surrounded by police. After a short stand-off police and protesters moved towards the Excel conference centre. A lot of people were still scattered around the area trying to formulate a plan of action. The Critical Mass cyclists also began to arrive. Around 100 people and the Manchester samba band, attempted to reach the venue via back streets. They passed through housing estates, cheered on by families and school kids. For a moment it seemed as if the whole school would storm the police line. Alas not! This small group was prevented from reaching the centre but did stop delegates from leaving their hotel. A stilt walker carried a heart-shaped placard which read ‘Fighting for peace is like fucking for virginity’ and a dodgy arms dealer tried to sell guns to the police. The other main group reached the edge of the centre where music continued and speeches were made. There were some arrests as police tried to contain the protesters. Meanwhile in Trafalgar Square the fountains flowed blood red.

And afterwards...
On Sept 12th the corridor between Custom House Station and the centre was blockaded to prevent delegates from entering the DSEi. On the 13th 2 people swam across the dock towards the Excel centre with anti-arms slogans painted on their bodies; a train full of delegates heading to the fair was stopped at Royal Victoria station and a dinner party for the delegates was disrupted by activists shouting slogans.

Witness appeals
Remember, your witness evidence could stop someone going to jail as prosecutions often rely on police witness statements alone. In particular, one man described as aged 30, 5’7”, in a white overall and bicycle helmet with a red cross symbol on it, was arrested at 2.10pm on the south side of the roundabout, south of Royal Victoria station, whilst trying to help a woman who had been kicked by the police. His solicitor needs to trace this woman. She is described as middle aged, long greyish hair, long flowing dress with a gnarled walking stick. Other witnesses also needed. The EF! AU is produced to aid the sharing of news, information and ideas amongst those interested in taking action. It is edited by a different collective each year to avoid the centralisation of power and information. We welcome submissions and articles (max 150 words) so if you’ve set up a group, taken action or want to publicise a campaign or project please let us know. No matter how big or small it seems, we’d like to share your news and inspiration. Feature articles and ideas are also appreciated.

Army offices invaded
On Oct 11th around 20 people invaded and occupied the army recruitment office on Queens Road in Brighton as a protest against the war in Afghanistan. Despite uniformed squaddies on the door, the protesters managed to barricade their way in, shutting down the office for 1-2 hours during the busy lunchtime period. The group “No War but the Class War” distributed leaflets to passers-by and hung a banner saying ‘Sabotage the War Effort’ whilst police closed off the whole road, redirected traffic and called out the fire brigade. Protesters outside talked to people arriving for recruitment interviews and to people in the street. Those inside watched army recruitment videos on the TV and disrupted recruitment interviews. The action was reported on local radio, right after news of more casualties in Afghanistan. nowarbutanother.com

Action and words
On Oct 7th the “No War but the Class War” discussion group was holding an open meeting about a class-based response to the current ‘war’. 30 minutes into the meeting news of the first US bombings arrived, within the hour they were out in the streets. 60 people set off down Regents Street with loud, vocal “No War but the Class War” chants. Receiving support and encouragement from both pedestrians and motorists (despite the hold-up to traffic) they reached Pall Mall before the cops discovered them. Shunning the gathering leftists in Trafalgar Square the group pushed on to Downing Square the group pushed on to Downing Street where a Socialist Party member told them all to shut-up as their collective voices were drowning out her megaphone! As their numbers were swollen by those who saw movement and activity as better than just standing around, the police began to see them as more of a threat. As a game of cat-and-mouse ensued numbers gradually dropped before the group dispersed to either go home or join the other groups out on the street. Contact nowarbutanother@yahoogroups.com

Pixies’ prison pranks
Pixies visited a prison construction site on the night of Sept 12th. The site in Ashford, Surrey is earmarked for a new, privately run, women’s prison. CAGE occupied the same site last year to highlight the growth in new prisons and the prison industry. Clearance work has started at the site but preferred bidders have not yet been announced.

With little planning, pixies descended on the site compound. Two lorries and a number of diggers were well and truly trashed and the message “No prison state” left for the contractors. The pixies said “It was fun and easy, give it a go”.

Notts visit peat
On Sept 21st 10 people from Nottingham visited Hatfield Moor, Yorkshire as their contribution to the days of action against peat mining. Hatfield Moor is one of the last remaining peat moors in England and is being stripped by Scotts for profit and garden compost.
“Despite a large amount of pre-publicity there was no police presence when we arrived and we entered the moor without hassle. Seeing dust in the distance we headed towards the machines at work and the workers tried to drive away. Despite a half-mile head start we headed them off, trapping the machines and stopping them working for the rest of the day. After about an hour and a half two police officers and the site manager turned up to say that so long as we didn’t damage anything we wouldn’t be arrested. A useful conversation was overheard: apparently disrupting the factory works would cause them massive problems - so what are you waiting for?”

For more information about the campaign to stop peat mining at Hatfield contact Leeds EF! 0113 262 9365

Cows in court
On Sept 28th, 11 people were found not guilty at Hemel Hempstead magistrates court of aggravated trespass at the Sainsbury’s distribution centre in Borehamwood, Hertfordshire. They were arrested during protests in February (see AU 74). The prosecution failed to prove that distributing animal produce fed on genetically modified feed is legal. The group revealed in court that despite massive public opposition and issuing a statement agreeing to phase out GM-fed animal products, Sainsbury’s were still selling the stuff and products weren’t even labelled. More cases due. Contact GEN 0207 272 1586 gen@gn.apc.org

Crashing Labour’s party
Thousands demonstrated in Brighton on Sept 30th, the first day of the Labour Party Conference. The protest was against privatisation and other issues, with a strong anti-war focus. As the march was heading off, dozens of riot police moved into the crowd to make unprovoked ‘intelligence led’ arrests, dragging off wobbles and others. A wide range of groups marched past numerous blocked streets and along the seafront. Led by a ‘carnival collective’ band, the march stuck to the agreed route and conditions, staying for around half an hour outside the conference centre.

Then on Sunday a fringe meeting for Penny Mортimer’s ‘Leave Country Sports Alone’ group was gatecrashed by black-clad anti-hunting protesters, who rudely heckled Lady M allalieu’s speech. The police turned up and made an arrest, but heckled Lady Mallalieu’s speech. The Anarchist action tour-Bristol

Solidarity for Paul
There was a solidarity demonstration, for Gotenburg prisoner Paul Robinson on Sept 6th. Many people gathered in front of the Swedish embassy and signed cards for him. Paul was arrested on June 15th, charged with violent riot and sentenced to 1-year imprisonment. He has always denied the charges. The arresting officer stated in court that he saw Paul throw stones over-arm then run away. Video footage and other police evidence contradicts this. At the end of September he lost his initial appeal and will now be appealing to the Supreme Court - a process which may take two months or more. Paul is also appealing against the length of his sentence. He remains in good spirits, undefeated, still fighting and with not an ounce of regret. Please write to him – see ‘prisoners.’ More info: defendpaul@hotmail.com

Subvert shenanigans
Under the cover of darkness on Sept 25th a subverted billboard in Norwich caused quite a stir. (See text on front cover). The poster was almost complete when the ‘proportionate response’ from Norwich police arrived: 5 cars (2 unmarked and carrying plain-clothed Special Branch). Not only were these cops willing to run, they were actually quite fast. Unfortunately, two people were arrested. After some intimidation and a night in the cells both were released without charge.

Corporate recruitment fair sabotaged with fire alarms. 8/9: Shell garage attacked with red paint and damage to car wash. Spray paint message: “Carlo lives” and “murderers”. Yuppie housing development sprayed: “Yup, yup, yup...here they come”, and another executive home development sprayed: “Executive houses - fucking the poor”.

Shell action Leeds
On Oct 15th activists disrupted a recruitment talk being given by Shell at the Marriott Hotel in Leeds. Just before the talk was scheduled to begin, activists managed to enter the conference room and another executive home development sprayed: “Executive houses - fucking the poor”. PGA call to action WTO summit Qatar Nov 9th
People’s Global Action (PGA) is calling on all grassroots social movements, community-based organisations, trade unions, students groups, indigenous peoples, autonomous collectives and everyone who wishes to participate around the world, to carry out actions against the WTO to coincide with the next ministerial summit in Doha, Qatar, November 9th-13th, 2001. Already built into the agenda are trade agreements which cover issues like the privatisation of health, education and water; forcing genetically modified foods and seeds on member countries; and patents on life forms.

Resist the WTO throughout the world through direct action and civil disobedience wherever communities are destroyed and ecosystems sacrificed for the sake of free trade!

A leaflet with more about PGA and the WTO can be downloaded from www.x21.org/pga Reports are circulating in the NGO community that the United States will not participate in the Doha M inisterial and the WTO is about to cancel the November meeting because of safety fears. More info at: www.wtowatch.org.

Our food industry is not the answer

Northern Foods

This is an excellent example of what the food processors and supermarkets are doing to the food industry. Lord Haskins, who sits on various government taskforces and openly hates small farmers, it is a multi-million pound operation. It supplies own-brand ready meals to the supermarkets as well as owning, amongst others, Dalesel, Ski Yoghurt, For’s confectionary and buns for Burger King. This is factory farming at its worst, and they pack, process and package full of additives and preservatives. Anyone who makes this kind of junk cannot really care about consumer health or food. The ironic thing is that a pack of Dalesel lamb chops cost double the amount you would pay in a small independent butcher. This is the lie of the supermarkets. They claim to sell cheap food, but a quick comparison with a farmer’s market or small retailer will show that you can get it cheaper there.

Keep agriculture out of the WTO

Agriculture is unlike any other industry - it cannot be compared, for example, to banking, computers or steel. This is because the agricultural sector is ‘multi-functional’. Not only are farmers responsible for our food security but like it or not they are responsible for a large part of the countryside and its biodiversity. Agriculture also forms the basis of rural livelihoods and a backbone for tourism and leisure. This is why many groups including FoE and Via Campesina claim that it should be kept out of the WTO. They can see that under WTO rules, agricultural trade will take precedence over food security, food safety and food quality as well as animal welfare, labour rights and the effects on the environment of chemically intensive agriculture. It is already clear that there is dispute over definitions of food safety with the US taking Sri Lanka to the WTO court for banning GM Os. Others feel that a trade agreement could stop the EU and US heavily subsidise their farmers and subsidise their exports. Developing countries also want the US and EU to open their agricultural markets to their exports. This in turn reveals the utter hypocrisy of the EU and US supposed neo-liberal agenda. There are also moves from developing countries to allow rural development and food security take precedence over trade within the WTO trading rules. The Qatari ministerial will be the crunch time to decide whether the Agreement on Agriculture will go ahead.

Why should we work with small farmers?

Activists have generally seen farmers as well-off Land Rover-driving, ancient-hedgerow-trafficking, subsidy-junkies, best known among ecological activists for their collective cry of ‘get off our land’ on mass trespasses, hunt sabbing and GM crop actions. Meanwhile, farmers have mostly seen activists as a bunch of uneducated city types telling them how to live and invading their land on mass trespasses, hunt sabbing and GM crop actions.

There is, however, a hard social and economic reality to farming today which risks the countryside becoming little more than soulless agrarian factory for the superstores, interspersed with golf courses, second homes and theme parks. The current foot and mouth outbreak will only hasten the demise of smaller and family-run farms. If trends continue over the next 5 to 15 years we are likely to see a decline in the number of farmers from 165 000 to between 8 000 - 15 000. This is not just a social disaster on a par with the death of the coal industry, but a cultural and environmental nightmare for anyone who cares about the British countryside and the people who live there.

Farmers have been interacting with the landscape in Britain for over 6000 years. W hile some environmentalists maintain that FM D has been a blessing for upland Britain by wiping out so many sheep, it is unlikely that this land would revert to a biologically diverse forest eco-system if it was just left to its own devices. The demise of small farmers is also unlikely to mean that less meat is produced and consumed in Britain. It is simply an excuse for the further industrialisation of meat production towards the hideous Confined Animal Feeding Operations (CAFOs) as has been done in the USA. It will also mean more meat is imported from abroad where animal welfare standards are even lower than in the UK.

Small farmers in the UK are a small, disenfranchised and exploited group struggling at the sharp end of globalisation, some of whom have taken direct action. There is a great deal of potential common ground with farmers who are anti-GM, anti-hunting, anti-supermarket and pro-environment and pro-animal welfare. There are more out there than you think.

What can we do?

The recent foot and mouth outbreak has provoked a good debate on the future of agriculture, revealing a general sense of its continued commercialisation.

The main enemies at this stage seem to be the Government, intent on taking the industrial food route, with organics as a niche market to keep the middle classes happy. They are taking their cue from the N FU, the least representative organisation since Globalise Resistance, and its chief exec, ‘Biotech’ Ben Gill. O ther influential food industrialists include Terry Leahy, CEO of Sainsbury and various government taskforces, and Lord Haskins of Northern Foods and Express Dairies - now rural recovery co-ordinator for areas badly affected by FMD. The man most in-line for a pie - Sean Rickard, is a former N FU economist. He is the architect behind agro-Industrial Britain.

As a direct action movement it is time we gave the supermarkets a good kicking. They are an anti-social phenomenon sitting at the centre of a web of modern problems: transport, health, environment, economic and social dislocation.

International events

Next February, ASEED Europe are organising a pan-European activist gathering to discuss visions of agriculture, in preparation for COP P of the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD) in The Hague next April. It will also prepare for the Via Campesina International Day of Farmer’s Struggle on 17th April. Via Campesina are an international group of small farmers and peasants who do exciting actions around the world.

Anyone interested in getting involved please contact Action on Corporate Agriculture via Corporate Watch. We’re trying to find a better name - please help. Oh and we’ve got loads facettos contact us for them. We’re also developing a ‘What’s that’s wrong with supermarkets?’ workshop which we will happily take to schools, community centres, N GOs, E FI meetings etc. Also please let us know if your group is doing anything on farming issues or supermarket activism.

Devises tree campaign

In Devizes, Wiltshire there has been an on-going campaign to save four London plane trees growing in the town square which the council wanted to kill. Organising themselves into a tree defenders group, locals had prevented the felling of the trees. Despite council assurances the trees wouldn’t be felled until further talks had taken place, on Oct 7th contractors chainsawed three trees. When the news broke, locals were quick to act. A picket formed around the tree, a tree sitter climbed it and a car was parked underneath. The action drew local media attention and brought the last tree a temporary reprieve. Source ELP.

Eggy Anne

During a visit to Nottingham to talk about homelessness on Sept 5th, Tory MP Anne Widdecombe had to dodge more missiles. As she entered the building a passing cyclist narrowly missed her with one egg. When she said “[the] fairest way to deal with refugees is to put them all into reception centres” one incensed woman stood up and ranted “you mean prisoners don’t you Anne, you racist scum? Have you ever been to prison? Do you have any idea how people suffer?” and flung two eggs. One hit the rostrum and splattered all over Ann’s suit. She was nicked by Special Branch to prevent a breach of the peace (too late) but released later after the old bag had left. Source Allsorts.

Women stop nukes

On Sept 23rd feminist avengers took action against the war machine (manifest in the convoy that regularly transports nuclear warheads from Burghfield, Berkshire to Coulport Base, West Scotland). Dressed in pink and silver, and penned in by the police, the women stood by the road as the convoy went past. The police left, then, to their surprise, the women saw the last convoy truck pass with only a motorcycle escort. They blocked the road, stopped the truck and climbed on top of it, remaining there for an hour. “We celebrate all life and weep for all death, we take direct action to show we are not consenting with the war ways of those who conspire globally to exercise control through fear. We will not cease till war is no more.” Contact Faslane Peace Camp (mixed women’s actions) 01436 820901. www.faslanepeacecamp.org Women’s actions vexedgirls@hotmail.com or mayday77@globalconnetk.com.

Burnley anti-fash

Despite police efforts to ban all political activity in Burnley on Sept 1st, due to threats of an NF march, one group of activists managed to enter the town (despite being a beacon in their bright yellow minibus). After failing to find any other demonstrators (fash or anti) the van mysteriously broke down in a “drive-thru” McDonalds, blocking it for 30 minutes whilst customers were leafleted. Elsewhere in Burnley people succeeded in leafleting despite the police. Source: Loombreaker.

Anti-fash Sunderland

About 60 people turned out to oppose a planned BNP event in Sunderland on Sept 15th. There were only a few fascists, who made no attempt to have a rally. The Anti-Fash held a very brief and non-confrontational rally followed by leafleting and speeches. Also a new forum and alliance, “Tyne and Wear Against Racism” has been set up. About 25 people from TWAR went leafleting round an estate where the BNP are standing candidates in the next election (they’ve started leafleting already) and leafleted 2500 houses. More events and regular meetings planned. TWAR PO Box 601, Sunderland SR2 7XY.

Anyone visiting fash web sites to check what they’re up to is advised to be cautious and think about masking their computers identify. It seems that Yorkshire NF have been up to that nasty old trick of posting up details of alleged anti and may be trying to entrap people through a bogus discussion list called “Smash the Nazis”. Bristol bike ride

European Car Free Day 2001, Sept 22nd, was celebrated in Bristol, in part, with what was billed as “The Big Bike Ride”. Roughly 100 cyclists participated in the ride although some were disappointed that the organisers were keen for it not to turn into a “Critical Mass” type event. Whilst stewards endeavoured to maintain a non-confrontational event against the wishes of some participants, even the most vociferous critics admitted that the children seemed to enjoy it.

Shell abuse animals

As if the human and environmental abuses of the oil industry weren’t enough, Shell also have plastic packaging materials tested on animals at Huntingdon Life Sciences. In early September a coalition of animal liberation protesters bought Shell Oil’s Stanlow refinery in Cheshire to a halt. From 5.30am lines of people blocked all roads in and out of the site, locked to each other and to concrete-filled oil drums to stop the police from moving them. By the late afternoon the police started dragging people away. 27 were arrested and charged with secondary picketing. Manchester Animal Protection. 07951 228 981 / 07931 586826.
